April 2008

Warm Greetings!

The last time we met in April, we were all excited at the prospect of spending special quality moments with our near and dear ones during the summer vacation. All of you must have returned after spending many memorable moments with family, friends and relatives. It must have been a special period meeting old friends, making new ones, entertaining your relatives and stretching and relaxing with your parents. This rejuvenating holiday has definitely prepared us to face the challenges that the new academic year is bringing with it.

During our last meet, Brinda Das brought us closer through her games. The many unknown talents of our old and new members were brought to the fore. The committee is now all the more committed to arrange very special programmes for the rest of the year.

Fashion and dress have always been a structuring social practice. Fashionable clothes should suit individual needs, be appropriate for the occasion, enhance ones personality, match the ambience, be comfortable on oneself, create interest in others and award a social identity

Is fashion a code, a message, a statement or a protocol? What is the difference between costume and fashion? People have speculated on dress since the ancient world. Fashion and dress have always been structuring social practice. Aesthetics of dress have existed since time immemorial. Significant research about fashion takes place around the world within sociology, urban geography and material culture. Today, there is enormous popular media interest in dress, lifestyle and fashion.

So for the month of June we shall have an expert who will update us on subjects relating to different cuts and styles that would suit different individuals. She will answer your queries on different kinds of fabric, the latest in vogue and, in short, assist you in creating your own fashion statement!
