

Greetings from The Aura,

There is something special about an artist that enables them to develop relationships with objects, persons places or water.

Chennai based artist Parvathi Nayar has been drawing over a million dots, to make an image on topics close to her heart - water and sustainability. Nayar, known for her multidisciplinary art, has showcased extensively worldwide. Her love for water and our environment is why her intelligent artwork needs to be not just seen, but also explained. She helped us fully understand her ideas through an impressive presentation of her work. While a work of art can be a thing of beauty, it can contribute to the sustainability dialogue in such subtle yet powerful ways.

The activities organized by Aura Aphrodite saw a splash of colours, creativity and excitement. July will be another month of exploration where we dive deep into one of the oldest forms of art!

Guest Speak

A very enriching experience to talk about my art, ecology and water to the amazing members of The Aura. A water centred morning, there were interactive sessions and a wonderfully receptive audience of women who have come together to explore the world and themselves in it. It was such an enriching experience for me too.
